

DO THE RIGHT THING WHEN NO ONE IS LOOKING

Photo courtesy of Alka Patel – Beehives in Transylvania

WHAT, WHY, WHO, WHEN & HOW

RESETTLEMENT PLANNING, LIVELIHOODS RESTORATION & ASPECTS OF SIA

A 3-day residential course for professionals working on environmental and community relations issues in infrastructure development and the extractives industry

The programme will focus on social assessment and management planning, with particular attention on resettlement planning, livelihoods restoration and stakeholder engagement. The course will also explain how to better integrate the social with the environmental in ESIA process, why and when typically it is done, who it should involve and how it should be costed.

This will be done by through:

- exploration of case studies
- presentations and question and answer sessions with specialists in ESIA, participatory mitigation planning, resettlement, livelihoods restoration, community development, indigenous people, health impacts, water and eco-systems services
- sharing knowledge, understanding and experiences with those working within similar roles and responsibilities.

The course will provide practical solutions and is facilitated by experienced practitioners working to IFC, WB, AfDB and EBRD requirements. We hope that participants will leave the programme feeling better equipped to choose the best people, including from within their own company, to do ESIA and work on social aspects in their projects.

Participants will include Environmental Managers, Community Relations Managers, Social Performance Managers – but anyone interested in paving the way for sustainable development in infrastructure development and the extractives industry is welcome.

Successful resettlement projects ultimately gain the cooperation of the affected community, lessen social risk, increase security and cost less in the long term and will benefit future contracts due to the improved social reputation of the development contractors

The course is co-ordinated and facilitated by experienced social and health assessment and resettlement practitioners, including Greg Huggins (Nomad), Dr Mirko Winkler (Swiss TPH), Philip Powell (Eco-livelihoods), Kathryn Tomlinson, and Alka Patel and Clayton White (LocalColour SRM).

23 – 27 November 2015
Kent, UK

Fee for workshop and materials £1000
Full board (accommodation and meals) £560
These prices are subject to 20% VAT

Places strictly limited
Earlybird discount available for registrations completed before 31 JULY 2015

To register contact us » training@localcolour.net
www.localcolour.net/training/

LocalColour

LocalColour is a collective of independent consultant practitioners & associates providing custom-made services to the extractives industry & sustainable development sector
www.localcolour.net